

Dr. Frederick R. Singer

Clinical Professor of Medicine and the Director of the Endocrine/Bone Disease Program at the John Wayne Cancer Institute

Dr. Singer specializes in metabolic bone disease and has a long-term experience in osteoporosis, primary hyperparathyroidism and skeletal complications of malignancy. His experience includes, Professor of Medicine at University of Southern California, Clinical Professor of Medicine at Geffen School of Medicine at UCLA and Attending Physician in Endocrine Clinic of Greater Los Angeles Veteran's Administration Center.

Dr. Singer received his premedical training at UCLA and attended UCSF School of Medicine. He interned and was Internal Medicine Resident at Wadsworth Veteran's Administration Center. Dr. Singer then went on to the Royal Postgraduate Medical School, London and Massachusetts General Hospital – Harvard Medical School, both where he was an Endocrine Fellow.

Dr. Singer has been presented with the following honors and awards: President of the American Society for Bone and Mineral Research, Chairman of the Board of The Paget Foundation, and Member of the Board of Trustees of the National Osteoporosis Foundation. In addition, Dr. Singer is affiliated with the following professional memberships: American Society for Bone and Mineral Research and The Endocrine Society.